

THE WHIG STANDARD.

OLD WINTER IS COMING.

BY MISS HANNAH GOULD.

Old Winter is coming again, alack!
How icy and cold is he!
He cares not a pin for a shivering back,
He's a saucy old chap to white and black,
He whistles his chills with a wonderful knack,
For a jolly old fellow is he!

A witty old fellow this Winter is
A mighty old fellow of glee;
He cracks his jokes on the pretty sweet miss,
The wrinkly old maiden unfit to kiss,
And freezes the dew of their lips—for this
Is the way with such fellows as he!

Old Winter is a frolicsome blade, I wot;
He is wild in his humor, and free!
He'll whistle along for the "want of thought,"
And set all the warmth of our furs at naught,
And ruffle the laces the pretty girls bought;
For a frolicsome fellow is he!

Old Winter is blowing his gusts along,
And merrily shaking the tree!
From morning till night he will sing his song;
Now moaning and short—now howling and long;
His voice is loud, for his lungs are strong—
A merry old fellow is he!

Old Winter is a wicked old chap, I ween—
As wicked as ever you'll see!
He withers the flowers so fresh and green,
And bites the nose of the mis of sixteen,
As she flippantly walks in maidenly sheen—
A wicked old fellow is he!

Old Winter is a tough old fellow for blows—
As tough as ever you'll see!
He'll trip up your trotters, and rend your clothes,
And stiffen your limbs from fingers to toes;
He minds not the cry of his friends or his foes;
A driving old fellow is he!

A cunning old fellow is Winter, they say—
A cunning old fellow is he!
He peeps in the crevices day by day,
To see how we are passing our time away,
And mark all our doings, from grave to gay—
I'm afraid he is peeping at me!

"HOW OLD ART THOU?"

BY S. D. PATTERSON.

How old art thou? Is life's fair morning glowing
In glorious beauty o'er thee? Does thy heart,
With hope and fancy's dreamy bliss o'erflowing,
Deem earth a paradise, where sorrow's smart,
Nor grief, nor fear may come? Is pleasure flinging
Fair flowers and precious fruits about thy way,
And from its pleasure house of blessings, bringing
New joys to charm and make thy spirit gay?
O! in the sunlight of thy young heart's gladness,
Remember thou that chance and change may come,
Even unto thee, and, with a cloud of sadness,
Wrap thy bright visions in funeral gloom—
And, though the seducing thought calls forth an anxious sigh,
Think that, though few thy years, thou'rt old enough to die!

How old art thou? Is youth's gay season over?
Hast learned that life and joy are things apart?
And dost thou wear a sunny smile, to cover
The anguish of a disappointed heart?
Or, are life's loveliest gift spread out before thee—
No good withheld, no fond desire denied—
Hath fortune waved her golden sceptre o'er thee,
Bidding each longing wish be gratified?
Or, hath Ambition's magic influence bound thee,
Luring thee onward to some lofty height
Above thy peers, where the proud world around thee
May gaze, admire, and own thy spirit's might?
Alas! her grief, her bliss, no aspirations high,
Can turn Fate's shaft aside. Thou'rt old enough to die!

How old art thou? Thou feeble man, and hoary,
Gay youth and manhood's prime have passed away;
And, on thy brow, Time's record tells the story
Of ripening years, and nature's sure decay.
As lengthening shadows mark the day declining,
Life's dial plate denotes thy setting sun—
And soon, all earthly cares and thoughts resigning,
Thou'lt rest in calm repose thy labor done.
The past with all its mingled joys and sorrows,
Its wealth and honors can be bought to thee—
When, from the future, thy worn spirit borrows
Visions, which prompt fond longings to be free;
And taste of bliss, unknown to mortal sense or eye,
Eternal in the heavens. Rejoice! 'Tis time for thee to die!

*Genesis xlvii. 8.

EMMETT AND HIS LOVE.

Now for the last sad look,
The last faint, cold embrace;
The latest kiss my love may print
Upon her lovely face.

Aye, bear her from my sight,
The bitterness is past;
But yet one charge my spirit leaves—
A dying one—the last!
Oh! bid her love my name
Through death, through infamy and shame.

In reading the history of ill-fated Ireland, how often does the heart turn, sick of bloody scenes and murders, to the simple and touching incidents that adorn the lives of those whose daring and mighty deeds stand as a record of chivalry upon the brightest page of the annals of the world. When the mind becomes diseased and careworn in contemplating the bloody transactions of the council chamber, with what transport and joy it leaves them to meditate on the fine affections and amiable attributes of the inner man, and pore over the scenes where "love and death" hath sorrowful meeting.

Robert Emmet was a celebrated lawyer and statesman of Ireland. During the struggle for independence he stood foremost on the forum and in the field for the liberty of his native country. He was the idol of Ireland.

"None knew him but to love him,
None named him but to praise."

Naturally of a warm and ardent temperament, with a heart glowing with patriotism, and a soul fired with the wrongs and wretchedness of his country, oh! it is marvel that he stepped forth in her darkest hour, and swore upon the altar of freedom that his countrymen should have their liberty, or he would pour out his heart's blood in the cause. Unfortunately he was betrayed by his enemies, convicted of the crime of treason and sentenced to be executed.

'Twas the evening of a lovely day—the last day for the noble and ill-fated Emmet. A young lady stood at the castle gate and desired admittance into the dungeon. She was closely veiled, and the keeper could not imagine who she was, nor why one of such haughty bearing could be a humble suppliant at the prison door. However, he granted her boon, led her to the dungeon, opened the massive iron door, then closing it again, and the lovers were alone. He was leaning against the prison wall with a downcast head, and his arms were folded on his breast. Gently she raised the veil from her face, and Emmet turned to gaze upon all the world contained for him—the girl whose sunny brow in the days of boyhood had been his polar star—the maiden who had sometimes made him think "the world was all sunshine." The clanking of the heavy chains sounded like a death-knell to her ears, and she wept like a child. Emmet said but little, yet he pressed her warmly to his bosom, and their feelings held a silent meeting—such a meeting, methinks, as is only held in Heaven, only there we part no more. In a low voice he besought her not to forget him when the cold grave received his body. He spoke of bygone days—the happy hours of childhood—when his hopes were bright and glorious, and he concluded by requesting her sometimes to visit the places that were hallowed by his memory from the earliest days of infancy, and though the world pronounce his name with scorn and contempt, oh! he prayed she would cling to him with affection, and remember him when all others should forget. Hark! the church bell sounded, and he remembered the time of execution. The turnkey entered, and after dashing a tear from his eye, he separated them from their long embrace, and led the lady from the dungeon. At the entrance she turned, and their eyes met—they could not say farewell—the door swung upon its heavy hinges, and they parted forever. No, not forever. Is there no Heaven?

"And one—o'er her myrtle showers!
Its leaves by soft winds fanned;
She faded, midst Italian flowers—
The last of that fair band."

'Twas in the land of Italy—it was the gorgeous time of sunset in Italy—what a magnificent scene! A pale emaciated girl laid upon her bed of death. Oh! was it hard for her to die, far from her home, in this beautiful land, where flowers bloom perennial, and the balmy air comes freshly to the pinning soul. Oh! no—her star had set; the brightness of her dream had faded; her heart was broken. When ties have been formed on earth, close, burning ties, what is more heart-rending and agonizing to the spirit, than to find at last the beloved one is snatched away, and all our love is given to "passing flowers." Enough; she died; the betrothed of Robert Emmet, the lovely Ellen Curran. Italy contains her last remains—its flowers breathe their fragrance over her grave, and the lulling tones of the shepherd's lute sound a requiem to her memory.

Ancient Mechanics.—Tradition has scarcely preserved a single anecdote or circumstance relating to those meritorious men with whom any of the useful arts originated; and when, in process of time, history took a stand in the temple of science, her professors deemed it beneath her dignity to record inventors of machines or improvers of the useful arts; thus nearly all knowledge of those to whom the world is under the highest obligations has perished forever. The scholar mourns and the antiquary weeps over the wreck of ancient learning and art; the philosopher regrets that sufficient has not been preserved to elucidate several interesting discoveries which history has mentioned, nor to prove that those principles of science upon which the action of some old machines depended were understood; and the mechanic inquires in vain for the process by which his predecessors in remote ages worked the hardest granite without iron, transported it in masses that astound us, and used them in the erection of stupendous buildings, apparently with the facility that modern workmen lay bricks or raise the lintels of doors. The machines by which they were elevated are as unknown as the individuals who directed their movements. We are almost ignorant of their modes of working the metals; of the alloys which rival steel for hardness; of their furnaces, crucibles, and moulds; the details of forming the ennobling statue, or more useful skilful or caldron. Did the ancients laminate between rollers, and draw wire through plates as we do? or was it extended by hammers, as some specimens of both seem to show? On these and a thousand other subjects, much uncertainty prevails. Unfortunately, learned men of old deemed it a part of wisdom to conceal from the vulgar all discoveries in science. With this view, they wrapped them in mystical figures, that the people might not comprehend them. The custom at one time became so general, that philosophers refused to leave anything in writing explanatory of their researches.

Acid of Wood—Its Effects on Salt and Butter.
An exchange paper makes the following statement: "It has been frequently remarked by those who are in the habit of packing butter, that it is kept best put down in stone; the next best in oak or white ash firkins, the wood of which had been boiled several hours previous to working, and that butter packed in firkins of unprepared wood, frequently acquired a strong and disagreeable flavor, which seriously injured its quality. The reason of this has not been generally understood. Mr. Moir, of Scotland, has been instituting a series of experiments on the subject, which appears to have thrown some light on the matter. He found that most kinds of wood contained considerable quantities of pyroligneous acid, which decomposes the salt with which it comes in contact. The linden, or bass-wood, was the only wood he found entirely free; but the other kinds he experimented upon were easily freed from the acid by boiling three or four hours, well pressed under water. It is evident that firkins made of staves prepared in this way, would be decidedly improved, and as the preservation of butter in a sweet and pure state, is an important matter to the dairyman, we think much would be gained by a proper attention to the vessels in which it is kept."

LIME.—The subscriber, having at length procured a supply of pure Limestone, will be prepared to furnish the customers of the Hamburg Lime Kilns with Lime, on Tuesday, the 25th instant, and for the remainder of the season, at 25 cents per barrel at the Kilns, at $1 delivered, as heretofore. The Lime being burnt with wood is suitable for plastering. On hand, best Hydraulic Cement, Calcined Plaster, and Ground Marble. W.M. EASBY.

FISH & CO.—THREE PREMIUMS!!!—The late fair of the American Institute in New York awarded us the first premium for the best Nutria Beaver Hats, and the Franklin Institute, Philadelphia, two premiums for the Best Nutria and Mole-skin Hat. Gentlemen wishing to procure a splendid "Caput Cover," finished after "Fish's" splendid Fall Model, by letting us glance at their "belongings" will be sure to get an article that will please, at New York prices. Also, Caps, Muffs, Fur Trimmings, &c., at reasonable prices. O. FISH & CO., Hatters, No. 1 and 2 Brown's Hotel, Washington, nov 25-3t and 137 Broadway, New York.

WHY IS THIS?

We see it stated that the War Department at Washington has advertised for several thousand yards of English and French calicoes, for Indian annuities. It is a fact, we believe, that a very large portion of the calicoes now worn in the United States are of American manufacture. They are cheaper, of as good and durable colors, of as tasteful patterns, and firmer fabric, than the foreign. Are they not good enough for the Indians? Our public officers occupy a singular position towards the people of their own country, whose servants they are. When anything is required for public use, they forget their own countrymen, and send abroad for supplies, as if it were derogatory to know our own artisans or to look at their productions! When the people's money is entrusted to them to lay out, it is expended in other countries, and the profits of supply bestowed upon the subjects of a foreign government; but when money is to be raised to pay for their purchases, or their own salaries, then they can find out how to exact from their countrymen the sum required! In no country but this would such a course be tolerated. Think of it, good people, one and all. Your servants are alien to your feelings and interests. Your own manufactures, good enough for you and your wives and children, are not good enough for the use of the Indians, or for covering the floors of the halls for your own Representatives in Congress. This anti-American, this foreign feeling, should be repudiated, and the sooner the better.—Cincinnati Gazette.

The People moving in North Carolina.—The last Raleigh Register contains reports of the proceedings of a large and enthusiastic Whig meeting in that State, called to appoint delegates to a State Convention to nominate a candidate for Governor. The Raleigh Register says: "Besides the Whig meetings which we publish to-day, we have on hand the proceedings of meetings in the following counties, which shall appear in our next, viz: Montgomery, Haywood, Orange, Franklin, Bertie, Perquimans, Cabarrus, Columbus, and Cherokee. There is no doubt, now, that the Whig Convention will be one of the most imposing assemblages ever convened in North Carolina."

The State Convention to be held on the 7th of December next. All the county meetings unanimously adopted resolutions in favor of the nomination of Henry Clay. One of the resolutions adopted in the strong Whig county of Randolph, after instructing the delegates to support Henry Clay, says, "and some suitable individual of undoubted Whig principles, as a candidate for the Vice Presidency."

IMPORTANT TO MEMBERS OF CONGRESS, STRANGERS, AND CITIZENS.—SAMUEL FOWLER, Merchant Tailor, respectfully invites the attention of Gentlemen having clothing to purchase to his present extensive supply of Fall and Winter Goods, embracing French and English Cloths, Cassimeres, and Vestings, which he engages to have made up in the handsomest style at the shortest notice. Whereas, certain Dry Goods Dealers have endeavored, through the public prints, to create the impression that they could furnish a suit of clothes some fifteen or twenty dollars less than tailors' prices, I hereby challenge a comparison of my goods and prices with theirs, and undertake to prove, not only the absence of truth in such statements, but to establish the fact that I am making up the same goods 15 to 20 per cent. cheaper than said humbugging gentry. I also engage to supply a better coat for $20 than is afforded by a Boston itinerant tailor at a higher price.

PERIFOCAL, OR AMERICAN PERISCOPIC SPECTACLES,

SUPERIOR to any other kind in use, constructed in accordance with the philosophy of Nature, in the peculiar form of a CONCAVO-CONVEX ELLIPSE; admirably adapted to the organs of Sight, and perfectly natural to the Eye; affording altogether the best artificial help to the human vision ever invented. They are manufactured only by H. M. FAINE & Co., Massachusetts, and can be obtained in this city of

S. MASI,
At his store on Pennsylvania avenue, near Gadsby's, to whom we have consigned a large assortment, suited to every age and condition of the eye.

The Perifocal Glasses can be used for the greatest length of time, either by day or night, with perfect ease, (when selected to suit the state of the eye,) and never cause that giddiness of the head, or unpleasant sensation to the eyes, that many experience from using the common kind, but tend to strengthen and improve the sight; as will be seen by the numerous testimonials from those who have used them, which can be examined by calling as above. Perifocal Glasses put into other spectacle frames.

N. B. All persons not satisfied with these Glasses after making trial of them, are particularly requested to have them exchanged until suited.

WHEN WILL THE PUBLIC CEASE TO BE HUMBUGGED?—P. W. BROWNING, Merchant Tailor, in opposition to all humbuggers, most respectfully requests members of Congress and strangers visiting the city, not to purchase their clothing before calling to examine his large and superior stock of French and English Cloths, Cassimeres, and Vestings of the latest styles; as he is prepared to prove to them, that he is selling the same article of clothing from 20 to 25 per cent. cheaper than certain dry goods storekeepers that wish to take the trade out of the tailors' hands by holding out false pretences to the public, that they are selling suits of clothes from $10 to $20 cheaper than they can be purchased elsewhere. I want to know how it is possible for any set of men that have no practical knowledge of the business, to sell clothes cheaper than practical tailors—men that know no more about making coats than they know about laying brick—notwithstanding all their arrangements with the celebrated tailors to cut and make their clothes, and their great facilities for buying goods, unless they have a facility for buying without paying for them? I am determined to undersell them, and not to sacrifice my trade to such an avicious set of men until the last dollar is gone! All I ask is for you to call and examine for yourselves.
